This project will be a collaborative venture with the NIC Community Services Division.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background: In 2006 the National Institute of Justice (NIJ) funded a study titled "Gendered Violence and Safety: A Contextual Approach to Improving Security in Women's Facilities." More recently, the National Institute of Corrections funded the Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) Validation Project for Improving Safety in Women's Facilities (cooperative agreement #10PEI34GKB6), which further contributed to the body of work addressing this issue. Sandwiched between those efforts has been the release of the PREA National Standards to Prevent, Detect, and Respond to Prison Rape, released in 2012, which has significant implications for correctional settings housing women and girls. A collection of standards comparison materials is available on the Web at the following locations: <http://nicic.gov/Library/026085>; <http://nicic.gov/Library/026082>; <http://nicic.gov/Library/026083>; <http://nicic.gov/Library/026084>. Over the past few decades, through research efforts and improved practice, the corrections profession has had access to a great deal of information, which has influenced continuing research efforts, training, assessment and classification, development of program models, and the creation of promising practices specific to improving system outcomes and individual outcomes for justice-involved women. While many current practices within criminal justice are seen as applicable to both justice-involved men and women, more recently the corrections profession has had opportunities to sharpen practice and more effectively manage resources in working with women in correctional settings.

Scope of Work: The awardee must develop a blended learning curriculum, including the piloting of the curriculum. The curriculum must use a variety of delivery methodologies, which could include readings, case study review, webinars, onsite delivery, and pre- and post-training activities. A virtual instructor-led training format will be considered if it can be demonstrated that the transfer of knowledge to the participants is effective. Awardees should develop the materials specific to physical and sexual safety in women's correctional facilities, based on current research, knowledge, best practice, and reflective of the experiences of corrections professionals and the target population. It should also include outlined method(s) for the transfer of learning, opportunities for skills practice, follow up coaching/assistance, and a method to measure the effectiveness of the training curriculum. The deliverables will help advance and foster professional correctional environments while enhancing safety and security and positively influencing systems, staff, and justice-involved women.

Deliverables: Tasks to be performed through this cooperative agreement include: (1) Conducting a literature search to contribute to curriculum development (2) convening a working session at an approved location; designing the working agenda; providing facilitation; and using content from the session to inform project deliverables. Working session participants will be identified in collaboration with and upon the approval of the NIC project staff. (3) working with NIC project staff and designated experts to develop deliverables. Deliverables could include a facilitator's manual and participant workbook, audiovisual materials, supplemental readings, pre/post measures of learning and other materials that facilitate learning. (4) developing and delivering the final curriculum modeled on the instructional theory into practice format (5) creating a final report that summarizes the project.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: All technical or programmatic questions concerning this announcement should be directed to Maureen Buell, Correctional Program Specialist, National Institute of Corrections, who may be reached by email at mbuell@bop.gov. In addition to the direct reply, all questions and responses will be posted on NIC's Web site at www.nicic.gov for public review (the names or affiliations of those submitting questions will not be posted). The Web site will be updated regularly and postings will remain on the Web site until the closing date of this cooperative agreement solicitation.
