

the proposed amendments, giving rise to the information collection. The information collection is necessary to ensure QFC contracts are amended in compliance with the rule. The FDIC's rule applies to FDIC-supervised institutions that are subsidiaries of GSIBs and sets forth requirements parallel to those contained in similar rules recently published by the FRB and the OCC with regard to entities they supervise to ensure consistent regulatory treatment of QFCs among the various entities within a GSIB group. All institutions that were covered FSI on January 1, 2018 were required to comply with the QFC stay rule by January 1, 2020. That means that, except for the three possible exceptions described below, all required paperwork revisions that are required to be completed by the covered entities to comply with the rule should have been completed by January 1, 2020. Consequently, for the purpose of 2021 and future PRA analysis, the FDIC does not expect any on-occasion paperwork burden associated with the rule. The three exceptions to the foregoing statement are: (i) Under the QFC stay rule, a covered FSI is not required to bring QFCs with a counterparty that were entered into prior to January 1, 2019 into compliance unless the covered FSI or any affiliate of the covered FSI becomes party to a QFC with the same counterparty or a consolidated affiliate of that party on or after January 1, 2019 (subject to special rules relating to institutions that become covered FSIs after January 1, 2018); (ii) entities that become covered entities after January 1 2018 have extended compliance periods (which can extend the date for compliance to the date that is the first day of the calendar quarter immediately following one year, 18 months or two years (depending on the type of counterparty) from the date the entity first became a covered entity); and (iii) a covered FSI might enter into a QFC with a counterparty that is not yet covered by documentation that complies with the rule. Moreover, because the market practices and conventions relating to derivatives, repo, SFT and other QFC products have evolved to include the stay provisions in the documentation used by market participants, FDIC estimates that any legal documentation review will be addressed as a part of the normal business on-boarding or maintenance of the business relations. However, FDIC recognizes that there is a possibility of a new entrant or a new product that can fall under the scope of the subject rule and, consequently, provides for a possibility of one or more respondents that can be impacted by the rule.

As noted above, the industry undertook major initiatives to achieve streamlining and straight-through processing for both on-boarding and maintenance of the QFC records over the last years. Consequently, in case a new entrant/product will be scoped-in by the subject rule to impose the paperwork burden, FDIC estimates that such burden will be less than half of the burden estimated in 2018 thanks to the automation and standardization of business processes. Accordingly, the time per response has been revised to 20 hours from the 40 hours previously estimated.

Request for Comment

Comments are invited on: (a) Whether the collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the FDIC's functions, including whether the information has practical utility; (b) the accuracy of the estimates of the burden of the information collection, including the validity of the methodology and assumptions used; (c) ways to enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and (d) ways to minimize the burden of the collection of information on respondents, including through the use of automated collection techniques or other forms of information technology. All comments will become a matter of public record.
