

practitioners in the NPDB. Unlike a traditional query, PDS enrolled practitioners are continuously monitored and subscribed entities need not pay for multiple queries each time they want to access new information on a practitioner. The following table charts the growth of PDS enrollments beginning in June 2007 through June 2010 for the NPDB and the HIPDB:

NUMBER OF PRACTITIONERS ENROLLED IN PDS

Month/year	NPDB	HIPDB
June 2010	481,794	125,649
June 2009	311,275	101,720
June 2008	113,631	12,592
June 2007	47,641	2,005

The number of enrollments is steadily climbing and re-enrollment rates for this service are approximately 90 percent. This service is quickly becoming the benchmark for monitoring practitioner credentials because it is designed and developed to meet new accreditation standards that require on-going monitoring of practitioners. In light of these developments, HRSA is making this service a permanent feature. The name change from PDS to Continuous Query better captures the true nature of this service, which is the continuous monitoring of enrolled practitioners.

All aspects of the PDS querying service as described in the March 7, 2007 notice are still in effect except for the upgrade from prototype to permanent status and the name change set forth in this notice.

II. Revisions to Previous Notice

This notice is to inform the public that the prototype status for PDS is removed and that the name of the PDS querying service has been changed to Continuous Query.

Dated: September 16, 2011.
