SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Dodd-Frank Act) vested the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection (Bureau) with supervisory and rulemaking authority over nonbank covered persons that offer or provide payday loans to consumers. In an effort to listen, learn, and gather information on the ground that will to help the Bureau better understand this market, the Bureau held a public field hearing on short-term, small-dollar loans, such as payday loans and bank "deposit advances" on January 19, 2012 in Birmingham, Alabama.

Payday lending products are typically marketed to bridge a cash flow shortage between pay or benefits checks. They generally have three features: The loans are small dollar amounts; borrowers must repay the loan quickly; and they require that a borrower give lenders access to repayment through a claim on the borrower's deposit account. The Bureau held the Birmingham field hearing to gather information and input from experts and the public on the payday-lending market to help determine the right approach to protect consumers and ensure that they have access to a small-loan market that is fair, transparent, and competitive. A number of questions were raised on which the Bureau is interested in gathering additional public feedback. For example, does the impact of payday loans and deposit-advance products vary by the type of consumer? Who is helped and who is harmed by deposit-advance and payday products? Does the answer vary depending on whether the product is provided by a storefront, a bank, or online? How are small-dollar loans and products marketed?

The transcript of the hearing has been posted on the Bureau's Web site at <http://consumerfinance.gov>. The Bureau invites the public to review the transcript and submit additional comment on the subjects discussed at the hearing.

Dated: March 13, 2012.

Meredith Fuchs,

Chief of Staff, Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection.
