

reflects more the effect of the starting point from which return is measured: in contrast, from January 1, 1991 (the starting point for the 10-year returns reported as of December 31, 2000) to September 30, 2001, the average annual return of the OVAF Capital Appreciation and Fidelity VIP Growth are 14.96% and 14.72%, respectively. In light of the long-term perspective that is particularly appropriate under variable contracts, Applicants believe that the longer-term results are more significant for contract owners. Even with year-to-date losses factored in, Applicants submit that Fidelity VIP Growth's 10-year performance is comparable to the 10-year performance of OVAF Capital Appreciation.

48. Applicants submit that although the one-year return for JPVF World Growth Stock as of December 31, 2000, was lower than the corresponding return for JPVF Global Hard Assets, the five- and 10-year returns were significantly higher. Moreover, JPVF World Growth Stock's unaudited total returns as of September 30, 2001, for all periods shown were higher than the corresponding returns of JPVF Global Hard Assets. Accordingly, in light of the long-term perspective that is particularly appropriate under variable contracts, Applicants believe that JPVF World Growth Stock's performance further supports its appropriateness as a substitute for JPVF Global Hard Assets.

49. While there is no guarantee that past performance will continue, Applicants believe that the foregoing return data support the view that the Substitutions are not expected to diminish performance or otherwise adversely affect Contract values.

50. Applicants request an order of the Commission pursuant to Section 26(c) of the 1940 Act to permit them to effect the Substitutions on the terms set forth in this Amended Application.

For the Commission, by the Division of Investment Management, pursuant to delegated authority.

Jonathan G. Katz,
Secretary.
