spoc cells, that can be induced, either in vivo or in vitro, to differentiate into cardiomyocytes. Spoc cells may be differentiated and utilized for screening agents that affect cardiomyocytes and as therapeutic agents in the treatment of myocardial defects.

The subject invention is directed to the cDNA sequence and the deduced amino acid sequence of the human Maxp1 gene. Maxp1 is frequently downregulated in primary human tumors. Accordingly, a vector comprising the cDNA sequence, a host cell comprising such a vector, a method of using the vector, such as one comprising a cDNA sequence in which the C-terminal Ras binding site has been mutated or deleted, or the polypeptide (or fragment thereof, such as one in which the Cterminal Ras binding site has been mutated or deleted) in the prophylactic and therapeutic treatment of cancer, a method of assaying small molecules for the ability to stimulate Maxp1 growth inhibitory function in cancer cells that remain positive for Maxp1 expression, and the assessment of the levels of Maxp1 mRNA or protein in the diagnosis, characterization and prognosis of cancer are additional, nonlimiting embodiments of the invention.

Further embodiments include: (a) Diagnosis and prediction of tumor characteristics, (b) gene therapy to restore Nore1/Maxp1 function in tumor cells which have lost protein expression, (c) the use of small molecules to simulate Nore1/Maxp1 growth inhibitory function in tumor cells which remain positive for Nore1/ Maxp1 expression, (d) the use of protein fragments/small molecules based on Nore1/Maxp1 structure to bind and inhibit the function of mutant Ras oncoproteins, and (e) a specific polyclonal antibody that works in westerns and in immunohistochemistry.
