Proposed Project

Assess Reporting Practices for Q fever in each State, and Collect Retrospective Information on Numbers of Q fever Cases Reported between 1978-1999—New—National Center for Infectious Diseases (NCID), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). Q fever, caused by the rickettsial agent Coxiella burnetii, is considered a potential agent of bioterrorism. Q fever in humans was made nationally notifiable in the United States in 1999, and data are collected passively by CDC through the National Electronic Telecommunications System for Surveillance (NETSS). At the time Q fever was made nationally notifiable, approximately half of states already considered it a reportable disease. However, current information on how many states have changed their reporting criteria since 1999 or what reporting methods are used are not available, making it difficult to interpret data reported to NETSS. Q fever reporting data is available by state for the years 1948–1977, and complete annual NETSS data is available beginning in the year 2000. However, data for the years 1978–1999 have never been collected. These data are vitally important to establish baseline rates of infection, providing immediate benefits in understanding the geographic distribution of Q fever in the United States. Without these data, it will take several years to acquire useful NETSS data to make the same assessments.

The purpose of this study is to assess reporting practices for Q fever in each state, and to collect retrospective information on numbers of Q fever cases reported between 1978–1999.

Respondents include an epidemiologist and laboratorian in every state. The results will be used to evaluate Q fever reporting practices in each state, in order to better assess the usefulness of NETSS-reported data. Data will also be used to examine the epidemiology of cases reported between 1979–1999, including estimated incidence rates, geographic distribution maps, and demographic risk factors. The estimated cost to the public is between $3405–$6405. Time burden for response to Form A may vary, depending on whether there are cases of Q fever the state plans to report.

Respondents	Number of respondents	Number of responses per respondent	Avg. burden per respondent in hours	Total burden in hours
Part A: Epidemiologist	50	1	30–120/60	25–100
Part B: Laboratorians	50	1	15/60	13
Total				38–113

Dated: May 1, 2001.

Nancy Cheal,

Acting Associate Director for Policy, Planning and Evaluation, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
