

to charge for the use of the equipment, the recipient and their partner(s) should come to an agreement as to the fee collection method.

Comment: The transit agency further commented that FTA should consider exempting the vehicles of a joint developments' affordable housing tenants from the fee collection requirement.

Response: Exempting any private users from the fee collection requirements is outside the scope of the statute and is therefore not discussed further in Circular 7050.1C. However, FTA encourages recipients to work with their partners to consider negotiating a different fee structure for affordable housing tenants.

Comment: An industry association commented in support of the proposed changes to the Joint Development Circular and noted the importance of allowing the fee collection to be waived if the recipient demonstrates the cost to install a fee collection system is more than the costs paid by the users.

Response: FTA acknowledges these comments and refers the reader to the response provided above.

Comment: The industry association further commented that charging stations should be allowed to accommodate not only personal automobiles but any other form of electrically powered mobility devices such as electric bicycles, electric scooters, electric mopeds, or any other emerging battery-powered or zero-emission vehicle.

Response: The statute only addresses the collection of fees from "passenger vehicles" and does not address the shared or incidental use of the equipment by other vehicle types or the collection of fees from the users of those vehicles. 49 U.S.C. 5302(4)(G)(iv). While the term "passenger vehicle" is not defined in the statute, FTA interprets it to mean automobiles or vans, consistent with similar definitions in other Federal statutes. See 49 U.S.C. 30127(a)(2) ("multipurpose passenger vehicle"); 49 U.S.C. 32101(9)–(10) ("multipurpose passenger vehicle" and "passenger motor vehicle"); 49 U.S.C. 30127(a)(3) ("passenger car").

Comment: The industry association also commented that agencies should have the ability to cover the costs of the infrastructure, the operation and maintenance costs as well as the cost of the electricity provided.

Response: FTA concurs with this comment and further clarifies in the final circular that electricity costs are considered operating costs and would, therefore, fall under the fee collection requirements. Electricity costs may also be negotiated as part of the fair share of costs pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 5302(4)(G)(v).

Administrator.
